Board of Directors
CRYO-CELL International, Inc.
700 Brooker Creek Blvd.
Suite 1800
Oldsmar, FL 34677

Dear Directors:

I am writing this letter to share with you certain observations that I have made concerning the cord blood storage industry in general and CRYO-CELL International, Inc. ("CCEL" or the "Company") specifically. The reason that I am taking the time to do so is to hopefully make CCEL a more successful entity.

To put this in the appropriate context, I own directly in my name, or through certain other entities that I control, over 300,000 shares of CCEL common stock. Indirectly, through accounts that I manage, I control almost 5% of the outstanding shares of the Company. Furthermore, other parties – independent from each other and each acting in their own individual interests — with whom I have discussed the CCEL investment opportunity own approximately an additional 5% interest.

Cord Blood Storage Industry

Through private market studies as well as using publicly available information, I believe that the U.S. market size in 2004 for cord blood storage was approximately $100-$125 million in annual revenues. Information on Viacord was recently filed in a SEC S-1 filing by its parent company Viacell, Inc. whereby it was stated that Viacord's revenues were approximately $30 million generating $10 million in operating profits. This leads me to believe that CCEL's market share has been decreasing over the last 3 years.

Given the recent publicity on cord stem cells, my expectation is that the cord blood industry may double in size in 2005.

The Company

I became introduced to CCEL about 9 months ago through a friend who first was a shareholder of the Company and subsequently became a customer of CCEL. This led me to begin studying the market and CCEL in particular. I visited the Company in September 2004 at which time I met with Ms. Walton to learn more about CCEL. Subsequently, after due inquiry, I became aware that several other of my friends/acquaintances had also decided to store their children's cord blood in the last 12 months. However, all others had chosen either CBR or Viacord — leading me to ask the question WHY? Please allow me to set forth below certain suggestions that I believe will lead more people to choose CCEL as their cord blood storage provider.

- 1) The Company's website is, euphemistically speaking, "too busy". It should be revamped. (Perhaps, a new website is currently under development?) One notable deficiency is that the website does not actively promote perhaps the key competitive advantage of the company: CCEL has the newest facility using the most technically advanced equipment. Surely this fact should be more prominently displayed. More detail can be provided as to other specific website improvements, if requested.
- 2) Virtually all potential U.S. prospects today will use the internet to evaluate the available alternatives for cord blood/stem cell storage. An effective web campaign can be undertaken that will be economically very effective. Another shareholder of CCEL, Gilad Keren, who is the CEO of Waves Audio Ltd. (see www.waves.com) is willing to assist the Company in such regard. Waves is a leader in the audio technology field and conducts extremely successful internet marketing campaigns on its own behalf. Mr. Keren is willing to share his expertise because of his significant personal interest in CCEL.
- 3) An advertising campaign should be undertaken in The Wall Street Journal. The readers of this publication fall into the socio-economic demographics of potential customers. Furthermore, this would help CCEL make use of its competitive advantage of being the sole U.S. publicly traded cord blood/stem cell bank. Awareness in the investment community will cause greater stock ownership which will result in stockholders that will want to be customers. I believe that close to 100% of the stockholders in CCEL would pick the Company if they need such a service. Furthermore, stockholders would recommend the Company to their family and friends.

I would be pleased to discuss any aspects of this letter in further detail. The aforementioned suggestions are merely a few ideas out of many that I believe could be very valuable to CCEL. Finally, the Company should be careful not to become complacent as a result of the recent rise in CCEL's stock price.

I am aware of the recent resignation of a Director and, if so offered, would consider joining the Board.

Thank you for your consideration of the above. I hope the Company will fulfill its potential of being a leader in this rapidly growing market.

Sincerely,

/s/ David Portney

Exhibit 2

October 27, 2004

To: Mr. David Portnoy

Dear David,

This letter confirms our agreement for my investment of $75,000.00 into the National Financial Services brokerage account otherwise known as the "Fidelity" Investments account. This investment is intended to last for a period of 12 months or until 10/27/05 after which date you personally guarantee to pay me any shortfall if the account is worth less than $75,000.00 upon my giving you 30 days written or faxed notice of my intent for reimbursement for the $75,000.00 investment.

We further agree to split all profits, above the $75,000.00, on a 50/50 basis and, after the 12 month period has elapsed for this investment, I retain the right to cash out part or all of this account at anytime and I will receive the $75,000.00 initial investment, if no profits have been jointly taken out prior, and 50% of any profits realized thereon in the account. If there is a decrease in the account from the initial $75,000.00 investment (less any prior capital distributions) after the 12 months has elapsed, you agree to be personally and unconditionally liable for any and all shortfalls below the $75,000.00 investment and to pay me the same within 30 days notice as described above.

All tax consequences deriving from the usage of the account or trading in the account will be shares 50% / 50% between us.

Please sign beneath to show your complete agreement with the aforementioned.

To: Mr. Jamie Zidell

Date of Agreement: December 20, 2004

This letter confirms our agreement with regard to the TD Waterhouse brokerage account held in your name ("Zidell") that we have had for a number of years now – otherwise known as the "Waterhouse" account. This account currently is worth approximately $200,000. Zidell and David Portnoy ("Portnoy") are each entitled to 50% of the value of the account.

We hereby agree that in return for guaranteeing the Zidell share of the account as set forth below, Portnoy will be entitled to 75% of the future appreciation in the account above $200,000.

Portnoy will guarantee Zidell that in the event that after a 18 month period from the date hereunder, if Zidell's share of the account is worth less than $100,000, Portnoy will personally and unconditionally be liable for the shortfall below the $100,000 amount. Furthermore, Portnoy will agree to pay Zidell the same within 30 days notice upon Zidell giving Portnoy written or fixed notice of his request for the payment of such shortfall.

All tax consequences deriving from the usage of the account or trading in the account will be shared in accordance with our proportionate ownership in the account.
